TO TELL STORIES IS TO LIVE

ANN LUU TRONG

I am a storyteller. Though the people I photograph are strangers and the places I visit unfamiliar, they often feel strangely familiar—like echoes of something distant yet known. Drawn to mystery and ambiguity, I leave my visual narratives open to interpretation. Joan Didion's words, "We tell ourselves stories in order to live," resonate with me deeply because storytelling is at the heart of what it means to be human. These words hold personal significance to me, as they reflect why I photograph—to tell stories, and in telling them, to live.
